It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

PREFACE.

Since the issue of Part I. of these certificates my attention has been called to a further return, dated 11 Aug., 1548[1], by Sir Walter Mildmay and Robert Kelway or Calwey to the commission directing them to inquire and decide what schools, preachers, priests, and curates should be maintained, which adds considerably to the number, before given, of the foundations which were continued. The commissioners recommended that the grammar school, which had been kept in the chapel of Boroughbridge in the parish of Aldborough with the revenues of the chantry of Our Lady, should be continued, and that William Grey, incumbent there, should serve as schoolmaster at the wage of 3*li.* 2*s.* 3*d.*; that the chapels of Boroughbridge, Rawcliffe, and Dunsforth in the parish of Aldborough, wherein were founded several chantries, being chapels of ease and far distant from the parish church, should be continued; that the chapel of Bailey in the County of Lancaster but in the parish of Mitton in the County of York, being a chantry founded as a chapel of ease and distant three miles from the parish church, should be continued; that a grammar school thentofore kept in the parish of Pickering with the revenues of the Lady Guild founded there, should be continued, and that Richard Judson, schoolmaster, should remain at the wage of 1*li.* 15*s.* 0*d.* a year; that the chapel of Cloughton in the parish of Scalby, wherein a chantry was founded, being a chapel of ease distant from the parish church five miles, was necessary to be continued, and that William Knaggs, incumbent, should serve there at the wage of 3*li.* 16*s.* 8*d.* a year; that a grammar school which had been kept in the parish of Middleton with the revenues of Our Lady Guild, founded in the parish church, should be continued, and that Thomas Monketon should remain there at the wage of 18*s.* 4½*d.* a year; that the chapels of Lockton and Cropton in the said parish of Middleton, wherein were several chantries, being chapels of ease and far distant from the parish continued, and that Percival Arthington, incumbent, should serve the same; that a grammar school formerly kept in the parish of Owston with the revenues of the chantry of Our Lady founded in the parish church there, should be continued, and that John Rayner should remain at the yearly wage of 4*li.* 3*s.* 11½*d.*; that a grammar school kept in the parish of Cawthorne with the revenues of Boswell Chantry, founded for the parish there, should be continued, and that Richard Wigsall should remain as schoolmaster at the yearly wage of 5*li.* 4*s.* 0*d.*; that the chapels of Carlton and Hook, in the parish of Snaith, wherein were several chantries, being chapels of ease and far distant from the parish church, should be continued, and that Richard Walker, incumbent, should serve the chapel of Carlton for the yearly wage of 3*li.* 8*s.* 9*d.*, and Roger Leavins, incumbent, should serve the chapel of Hook as had heretofore been accustomed; that the chapel of Farneley in the parish of Leeds, wherein was a chantry, being a chapel of ease and distant three miles from the parish church, should be continued, and that Gabriel Crofte, incumbent, should serve for a yearly wage of 10*li.* 15*s.* 4*d.*; and that a grammar school kept in the parish of Normanton with the revenues of the lands given for the maintenance of Our Lady's service founded in the parish church, should be continued, and that Richard Johnson be schoolmaster there at the yearly wage of 59*s.* 2*d.* By an exemplification of another return to the above commission, it appears that a grammar school in Kingston upon Hull, supported with the revenues of the late chantry of Bishop Alcock, should be continued, and that John Olyver should remain as schoolmaster at a salary of 13*li.* 2*s.* 2*d.*, and that an assistant should be appointed to the Church of the Holy Trinity of Kingston upon Hull, and that Henry Ellis be so appointed at a salary of 6*li.* 6*s.* 8½*d.*

Besides those foundations above and previously set out as being deemed necessary to be continued by Sir Walter Mildmay and Robert Kelway, the following recommendations were made in what appears to be a report to the same commissioners by Henry Savill, the Crown Surveyor, on the certificates generally, but especially as to the pensions to be granted to the incumbents. It is recommended in this document that the grammar school at Romaldkirk, whereat Nicholas Horner was master, and which was supported out of a certain stock of money in the hands of the parishioners, be respited till the King's title should better appear; that the grammar school at Well should be continued till the King's title be examined; that the grammar school in the parish of Malton, founded by Robert Holgate, then Archbishop of York, did not come within the Act; and that the grammar school in the town of Richmond, supported by the bailiffs and burgesses of the same town, did not come within the said Act, to which is added tamen quære.[1] And also that the chapel or parish church of Haslewood, in the parish of Tadcaster, which was a chapel of ease of the people, should be continued, and that the King's receiver should levy the revenue and pay the same to the priest; that the chantry of St. Nicholas in Tadcaster should be continued; that the school of the college of Acaster, in the parish of Stillingfleet, be continued, and that William Gegoltson, who was appointed both to remain as schoolmaster and also to serve the cure there, should receive a salary of 8*li.* a year; that the chapel of Tinsley, in the parish of Rotherham, should be continued; that Rotherham college be continued; that it was necessary to have assistance to serve the cure at Doncaster; that the chapel of Farnley, in the parish of Otley, be continued; that the chapel of ease at Baildon should be continued; that Alexander Bothe be appointed to assist to serve the cure at Sheffield; that the chantry of St. Nicholas in Skipton, used as a grammar school, should be continued; that the chapel of Waddington, in the parish of Mitton, which was used as a parish church and five or six miles from the parish church, should be continued; that the chantry of the Rood at Kirkby Malhamdale, with the grammar school there, be continued; that the grammar school at Giggleswick be continued; that the chantry called Lupton chantry, in the parish of Sedbergh, founded for a free school, should be continued; that it was necessary to have a priest to assist in serving the cure at Wakefield; and that it was necessary to continue the chapel of Heptonstall, in the parish of Halifax, there being sixteen hundred houseling people there.[2]

These lists add largely to the number of schools and other foundations which were continued by Edward VI., but they do not, however, detract from the truth of the assertion in the preface to the former part of this volume[1] that Edward VI. founded no grammar school in Yorkshire where one had not previously existed, and some of the educational foundations which are returned upon these certificates appear to have been dissolved and the endowments confiscated. Mr. A. F. Leach has ably disposed of the idea which Green and other historians maintained, that Edward VI. was the founder of English education. If inquiry be made, it will be found that very few, if any, of the so-called King Edward VI. grammar schools had their origin in the reign of that monarch. Up to the time of the Reformation nearly all education was maintained by the Church, and when the chantries were dissolved practically the whole of the secondary education of the country would have been swept away, had not some provision for the instruction of the middle and lower classes been made by continuing, under new ordinances, some of the educational endowments which pious founders had previously provided. But under the new régime, instead of the schools and the stipends of the masters being supported, as formerly, by incomes derived from the profits of lands or of stocks of money or cattle, in very many cases a fixed sum of from 2*li.* to 13*li.* a year was appointed to be paid out of the Court of Augmentations for the maintenance of the school, which sum at the time it was allotted was probably considered a competent endowment, but as the value of money decreased, unless the endowment was supplemented by private munificence, the school was forced to close its doors, and so the school and endowment have in many cases become lost.[2]

The next most important class of foundations, some of which were continued under the commission above mentioned, consisted of the chapels of ease, which were much required in extensive parishes with a scattered population, and had been generally founded by the parishioners for their own convenience. It seems therefore that the dissolution of these chapels was a peculiar hardship. As early as 1233 the Pope granted licence to the Archbishop of York to build oratories and chapels, and to appoint to them priests, in places so distant from the parish churches that the people could with difficulty attend divine service, and the sick died before the priest could get to them to administer the last sacraments.[1] The necessity of these chapels of ease was especially felt in Yorkshire, where the inhabitants of so many outlying hamlets were cut off from their parish churches in winter time by impassable roads and flooded rivers, which is the reason time after time assigned by the commissioners for the necessity of the existence of such chapels, and yet comparatively few of them were recommended for continuance by Sir Walter Mildmay and Robert Kelway in the returns to their commission. Possibly it was the loss of the endowments of Ayton Chapel which occasioned the insurrection at Seamer referred to in the Preface to Part I., which chapel the inhabitants so piously kept up afterwards at their own expense.[2]

There seems to have been little, if any, opposition to the dissolution of the chantries by the persons whom it most concerned, namely, the chantry priests, who, however, were probably silenced by the promise of good pensions. The attack, too, on the chantry priests had been going on for some years, for we find that in or about 1536, Cranmer is reported to have said in a sermon at Paul's Cross that the King was "at full point for friars and chantry priests that they shall away all that, saving those that can preach."[3] But according to these certificates there is little ground for any outcry against the priests themselves, who appear to have been an honest though ignorant class of persons. Their characters are given in the Edward VI. certificates, from which we find that about one half are described as of honest qualities and indifferently or meanly learned, about a quarter of honest qualities and well learned, about an eighth as of honest qualities and not learned, about a sixteenth as of honest qualities and somewhat learned, and about a sixteenth are described as sick and impotent. It may be noticed, however, that those coming under the designation of well-learned are generally men aged from thirty to forty; it is quite possible, therefore, that the standard of learning was in accordance with the priest's proficiency in the new system, which younger men would have had more opportunity and inclination perhaps, to acquire than their elders. One or two, it may be noticed, held degrees, and at Selby the chantry priest is said to have had a good knowledge of music. Most of those who are described as of good learning, held other promotions with their chantries; a few, as at Skipton, St. John's Ousebridge End, and St. Peter the Little, in York, had parsonages besides their chantries, and some, it appears, served more than one chantry. A reason, possibly, for the good conduct of the chantry priests was that, in the case of misbehaviour, they were removable, generally by the rector of the parish, but sometimes, as at Topcliff, by the inhabitants of the district in which they served, or, as at Hull, by the Mayor and Commonalty. One or two only are described as unworthy to serve their cure, though some few were incapable from illness and infirmities; however, the life seems to have been a healthy one, as many of the priests lived to a good old age, such as William Colt, of the chantry of Our Lady in the church of Our Lady in Castlegate, York, who was ninety years of age at the time of the certificates, and we find many others of seventy and eighty years of age still serving. In most cases the chantry priest seems to have acted in much the same capacity in a parish as that now occupied by a curate, he assisted the parish priest in performing mass, hearing confessions, and visiting the sick, and also helped in the ordinary services of the church, excepting that few only were licensed to preach, like the schoolmaster at Giggleswick. In the cathedral church of York, besides praying for the soul of his founder and all Christian souls, each chantry priest had to be present in the choir in his habit of a parson on all principal and double feast days, Sundays, and nine lections, at Matins, Mass, Evensong, and Processions, when he had to read lessons, begin anthems, and to minister at the high altar as should be appointed to him by the officers of the choir. Besides these purely ecclesiastical duties, very many of the chantry priests were bound to teach a certain number of the children of the neighbourhood, which was the origin of most of our grammar schools.

Without touching upon the ordinances of the Yorkshire chantries, which, it is hoped, will form another volume for the Surtees Society, it will be of interest to mention the foundation charter for a chantry at the altar of St. Anne in the south arch (arca) of the church of the Blessed Mary of Badsworth, founded in 1510, to pray for the soul of Isabella, wife of William Vavasour and daughter of Robert Urswick,[1] as it gives some idea of the duties of a chantry priest. The charter ordains that a chaplain of secular habit, not otherwise beneficed, should celebrate a Requiem Mass every week and also a Placebo and Dirige, according to the use in the cathedral church of York, and should turn to the people at the first lavatory (primum lavatorium) in every mass and say De profundis, exhorting the people standing round to pray for the soul of the founder, and he should then say the collect Inclina, Domine, aurem tuam ad preces nostras, etc., for the same soul. And every year there should be an anniversary for the same Isabella, on Tuesday after the octaves of Easter, when there should be distributed to the poor of Badsworth 6*s*. 8*d*. under the superintendance of the rector. The chaplain was to be learned in plain song and grammar and should be present in the choir of the parish church on every Sunday and festival, at Matins, Mass, Vespers, Complin and other divine services, in his surplice, and was to read and sing as the rector should deem fit. He should not be absent from the said church for more than a month at a time, and then not without the licence of the rector. He should not play at dice or other illicit and prohibited games, except on the twelve days after Christmas, and should not frequent taverns and ale-houses at unseemly times, that is to say, in the summer time, from the feast of the Annunciation to the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary, after the hour of 10 p.m., and in winter, from the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary to the Annunciation, after 9 p.m. He was not to alienate the goods, books, jewels, and ornaments of the said chantry, but to preserve and repair them and the buildings and other possessions of the said chantry. If he should be convicted of incontinence, theft, rape, perjury, or other crime, or if he should be prevented by loss of any limb from performing his duties, he should be removed by the rector.

By the dissolution of the chantries, colleges, chapels, and other foundations, coming within the Act of 1 Edward VI., cap. 14, over five hundred secular clergy in the county of York were thrown out of employment, to each of whom a pension was granted. These secular clergy were very much better treated with regard to pensions than had been their brothers of the regular habit; for, whereas the pensions to the monks were apparently allotted upon no principle, but simply by the caprice or favour of the King's officers, those to the chantry and other priests seem to have been granted according to a fixed rate, namely, where the annual value of the chantry or other foundation was only 6*li.* or under, a pension to the full value was granted; to the incumbent whose chantry was worth over 6*li.* a year, a pension of two-thirds the annual value was given, but with a minimum pension of 6*li.*[1] As there were comparatively few chantries worth over 6*li.* a year, the average value being between 4*li.* and 5*li.*, the majority of the priests received pensions to the full yearly value of their chantries. The pensions were assigned by Sir Walter Mildmay and Robert Kelway under a commission dated 20 June, 1548, and the patents granting the pensions are dated in August following. At first the pensions appear to have been paid with fair regularity, but difficulties soon arose, principally because many of the pensioners sold their pensions, the traffic in which became quite a trade, while others left the county and were lost sight of, so that it was necessary in 1552 to issue a commission to various persons to inquire as to monks, nuns, and chantry priests receiving pensions; and if they were dead, when they died; who were unpaid and for how long; who had sold and alienated their pensions, and to whom. By the returns to this commission[2] it does not appear that the pensions were much in arrear, a year being about the longest time that they remained unpaid. Some of the pensioners could not be heard of, a few had received ecclesiastical preferments and thereby forfeited their pensions, and some had died, the arrears of whose pensions were paid to their representatives.[3] Under the Act for Extinguishing First Fruits, etc., Cardinal Pole, in 1556, had a return made of all those receiving pensions, from which we learn that the yearly sum then expended for pensions in the county of York was 4811*li.* 5*s.* 5¼*d.*, and for the shire of Richmond, which is returned separately, 468*li.* 17*s.* 10*d.*[1] A curious point which these certificates show is the number of parishioners a parish priest was considered able to look after; at Sheffield, where the number of houseling people is said to have been two thousand, there were a vicar and three stipendary priests, while at Halifax the same number of priests had to take care of eight thousand five hundred houseling people. Again, it is said there were two thousand houseling people and above at Doncaster whose confessions eight priests could "scant hear from the beginning of Lent to Palm Sunday" and then minister the sacrament during the week. The returns as to the number of houseling people is very interesting, for it assists to elucidate the vexed question as to the population at the middle of the sixteenth century. It might be fairly said that at this period, when everyone over 14 would be accounted a houseling person, or one who received the sacrament, that the houseling people would represent half the total population. It is difficult to arrive at the number of houseling people in the city of York, as all the parishes are not given, but at Ripon the number was nine thousand, at Halifax eight thousand five hundred, at Beverley the population is given as five thousand and above, at Hull there were three thousand houseling people, at Doncaster, Sheffield, Rotherham, Wakefield, and Scarborough the number is set down as two thousand each. With regard to the larger figures the numbers given may only be covering, but the smaller numbers seem to have been recorded with a certain amount of precision which looks like accuracy.

As may be noticed, the Yorkshire chantry certificates are not complete, for the returns as to many foundations known to have been dissolved under the Act of 1 Edward VI. are not to be found on them. The certificates, which are amongst the Augmentation Office Records at the Public Record Office (excepting the returns for Hull, which are preserved among the Corporation muniments at Hull) are, for the most part, in a fairly good condition, though some of them, as will be noticed by the blanks in the print, are torn and entirely obliterated. It should be here stated that Augmentation Office Chantry Certificates for Yorkshire Nos. 106 and 107 are duplicates of portions of Nos. 65 and 63 respectively, which are here printed, and Nos. 108 and 109 are summaries of the certificates apparently made for the purpose of allotting pensions; these it has not been thought necessary to print.

The editing of these chantry certificates was at first undertaken for the Society by Mr. J. J. Cartwright, M.A., F.S.A., but had to be relinquished by him owing to the increase of his public duties. To him I am indebted for a portion of the transcript and for many notes and suggestions which he was good enough to give me, and for which I have great pleasure in tendering my thanks. To our secretary, and to Mr. A. F. Leach, M.A., F.S.A., for notes and assistance, I must also return my thanks. The Society is also indebted to Mr. Hill Dawe and the Corporation of Hull for permitting me to have transcribed two copies of chantry certificates relating to Hull, the originals of which are not at the Public Record Office.

Maye it lyke your most honorable lordshippes to understand, that according to your comaundmentes to us given by your letters, we have considered the peticion of th'inhabitauntes of the towne of Beverleye, and by the serche of recordes towching the Kinges title to the premisses, we find the same landes, which theye make sute for, to be the possessions of the collegiate churche of Beverleye, and therefore we think the Kinges Majestye to have verie good right and title to the same landes, that they demaund by force of the statute made in the firste yere of his highnes reigne, concerning colleges and chaunteryes. Nevertheless we find by serche of the certificate made by the comissioners for the surveye of chaunteryes, remayning of record in his highnes courte, wherein we serve, that there was an office called the office of the woorkes within the same collegiate chirche, whiche had landes and ten.. and other proffettes to the yerelye valewe of lxviij*li.* xij*d.*, assigned, and with the proffettes thereof th'officer of the workes did from tyme to tyme repayre the said chirch, being also a parisshe chirche, and was accomptable to the college for the same. This is all we have to certifie your lordshippes in the premisses, referring the same to your good consideracions. Written the xiiijth of Julye, 1552.

Endorsed :—xiiij Julie, 1552. Mr. Chauncellor of the Augmentacions and Mr. Goodrick to the counsell touching the sute of th'inhabitantes of Beverley.

To the Kinges Majesties moste excellent heighnes

Most humblie compleyning unto your excellent heighnes your true and feithful subjectes, the burgesses and comynaltie of your graces towne of Beverley, that whereas there is within the said towne of Beverley a grete parrishe churche, comonly called the churche of Seinte John of Beverley, within which churche there was latelie a colleage, whiche had dyvers manours, landes, ten., and hereditamentes belonging unto the same amounting to the yerelye value of one thowsaunde poundes; all which manors, landes, ten., and hereditamentes are nowe come into your heighnes handes by reason of a statute, made for the dissolucion of colleges and chauntries. For the necessarie reparacions of whiche churche, long tyme syns, there was geven and assured certaine landes and wooddes, amountinge to the yerelie value of three score poundes and above, whiche landes and woodes by the saide statute were not geven to your heighnes, nor are not within the compas of the same statute, notwithstanding, most gracious soveraigne lorde, that ever syns the dissolucion of the said colledge, all the rentes and proffites of the same hath byn received to your Majesties use, by reason whereof the saide church is in grete decaye, and in shorte space is very like to fall into utter ruyn and decaie, the parrishioners not being hable to repayre the same. Furthermore, pleaseth it your grace to understande, that the said towne of Beverley is a market towne and the greatest within all Estryding of your Majesties countie of York, having a grete nombre of younthe within the same, and fyve thowsaund persons and above, whereof some of them be apte and mete to be brought up in learning whiche are not, for so muche as there is neither gramer schole or any other schole as yet founded wherewith they might be brought up in any vertuous studdie. For present remedy whereof, it may pleas your grace, of your moost noble habundante clemency and goodnes, not only to graunte unto your said humble and faithfull subjectes the said lx*li.* and above, which was and is assured to them by graunte and gifte, as aforementioned, but allso that there maye be erected within the said towne of your moost princely fundacion one fre gramer schole to the further encrease of such youthe as there remayneth at this present daye and in tyme to come, so shall the same youth be educated and taught of all thinges to serve God, to lyve in due obedyence and feare of your heighnes, their soveraigne lorde and king, and they with thole inhabitauntes of the said towne to praie (as they are bounde) for the preservacion of your moost excellent heighnes in estate long to reigne.

In the certificate to same, dated 18 June, 1558, Richard Brown, of Beverley, bailiff of the revenues of the provostry and keeper of the same house at the dissolution therof, deposed that there was, at the time of the dissolution, one gate house, which measured 20 feet in length and 10 feet in breadth, with a flat roof covered with lead, old and sore worn, and there were no other houses belonging to the said provostry covered with lead. Another deponent, Nicholas Lamire said that the said house was offered to him and others for sale, and they called in sundry artificers to value the same, and the plumbers valued the lead at 60*li.*, which, on being taken down by Robert Grey, was melted and sold to certain merchants of Hull.
